

43RD ANNUAL CALIFORNIA INDIAN DAY CELEBRATION

SEPTEMBER 22, 2016
THURSDAY

4:00 PM - 5:30 PM

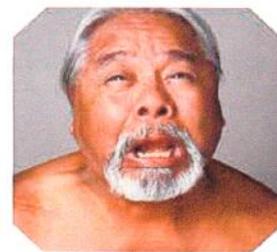

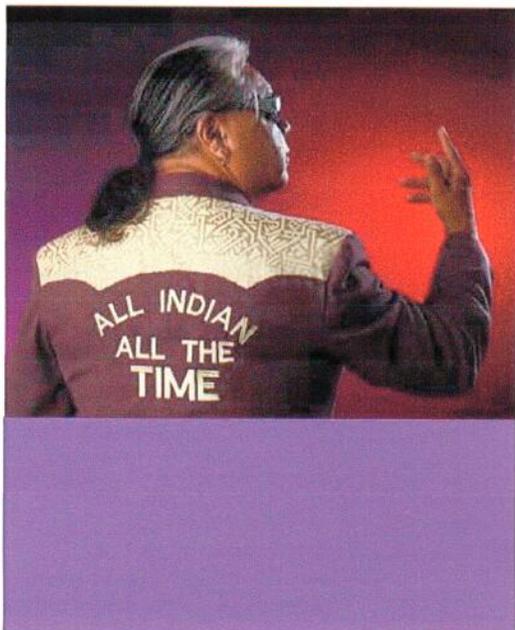

PALOMAR COLLEGE
BRUBECK THEATRE

SPECIAL GUEST: JAMES LUNA

Internationally renowned performance and installation artist James Luna (Puyukitchum/Ipai/ Mexican American Indian) resides on the La Jolla Indian Reservation in North County San Diego, California. With over 30 years of exhibition and performance experience Luna has given voice to Native American cultural issues, pursued innovative and versatile media within his disciplines, and charted waters for other artists to follow.

Don't be fooled that he is a nice Indian "Story Teller" as his stories are both humorous and painful at the same time. The stories are more than about the strife, misconceptions and commodifications of ethnicity in America. Luna deals with the realities of race from an insider view.*

~ Event is free of charge ~ Light refreshments will be served following performance ~

Sponsored by the American Indian Studies (AIS) Department and Native American Student Alliance (NASA). For more information please contact the AIS Department at (760) 744-1150 ext. 2425.

* pictures and text provided from James Luna 2016-2017 season brochure

Palomar College
1140 West Mission Road, San Marcos, CA 92069